2020-00108

PART C – DECISION UNDER APPEAL

The decision under appeal is the Ministry of Social Development and Poverty Reduction (the ministry) reconsideration decision dated March 18, 2020 which denied the appellant March 2020 disability assistance.

Specifically, the ministry found the appellant was not eligible for March disability assistance as the appellant's income exceeded the ministry's monthly rate of assistance.

PART D – RELEVANT LEGISLATION

Employment and Assistance for Persons with Disabilities Act- Section 3

Employment and Assistance for Persons with Disabilities Regulation- Sections 1, 9, and 24.

Schedule A Section -1, 2 and 4.

Schedule B- Section 1, 3, 6, 7, 8 and 9.

PART E – SUMMARY OF FACTS

The appellant is the sole recipient of disability assistance.

Summary of key dates:

- February 12, 2020- the appellant was advised they were not eligible for March disability assistance.
- February 19, 2020- the appellant submitted a Request for Reconsideration which was approved to be extended to March 18, 2020.
- March 18, 2020- the ministry completed the review of the appellant's Request for Reconsideration

Evidence before the ministry at the time of reconsideration:

Additional Information

- Request for Reconsideration application section 3, Reason for request for Reconsideration where the appellant stated:
 - Ministry staff told the appellant that a lump sum payment by CPP disability benefits would be declared as income in the month the appellant received it. As well, that the payment letter was so the appellant could have future disability benefits credit shared with the ministry and just receive one cheque – the appellant's provincial PWD benefit.
 - On the phone the agents told the appellant that if anyone tried to do anything else the appellant should appeal it and should make a request for reconsideration because the lump sum from Canada Pension Plan Disability benefits should be declared as income in the month the appellant received it and not declared as income back to a start date.
 - Annual earnings exemption should apply to the appellant's CPP disability benefits because the appellant paid income tax on it.
 - The Province of BC has been making commitments to improving the quality of life for people in BC. The ministry of Social Development and Poverty Reduction should start by letting people have their own money and allowing the annual earnings exemption to apply to unearned income.
 - My health is very poor and I can't work. My earnings exemption will go unused because I can't work. I am specifically appealing the decision to not allow the lump sum payment to be declared as income in the month it was received because that is what MSDPR staff have told me is in the regulations. I never signed a letter of payment agreeing to that. I thought it was for credit sharing.
- Consent to Deduction and Payment -Canada Pension Plan (CPP) form signed by the appellant July 23, 2019.

- Employment and Social Development Canada, Individual's Consent to Disclosure form signed by the appellant November 13, 2019.
- Monthly report for the ministry dated February 7, 2020 which notes an amount of $715.00 for CPP income.
- Letter from CPP dated January 13, 2020 which notes information about the appellant's CPP Disability benefit. CPP reimbursed $9,789.88 to the Ministry of Social Development for the period of September 2018-December 2019.
- Consent to Deduction and Payment form dated June 12, 2019 which notes monthly payments from September 2018-December 2019.
- In the Notice of Appeal dated April 3, 2020 the appellant stated:
 - The appellant's Canada pension plan disability benefits should apply to annual earnings as taxable income.
 - A note attached to the appeal stating:
 - The appellant has an additional submission which would have been submitted but the library is closed and the appellant does not have access to a computer.
- The ministry's submission in this matter will be the reconsideration summary provided in the Record of Ministry Decision.

PART F – REASONS FOR PANEL DECISION

The issue in this appeal is whether the ministry was reasonable in determining that the appellant was not eligible for March disability assistance as the appellant's income exceeded the ministry's monthly rate of assistance.

Appellant's Position

The appellant argued the lump sum CPP disability benefits received by the appellant should be declared as income not unearned income as to allow the appellant to claim the annual earnings exemption.

Ministry's Position

The ministry argued the appellant as a single person in receipt of disability assistance was entitled to benefits determined under Schedule A as $1183.42. As the appellant's net income of $2086.36 exceeded the ministry rate of assistance the appellant was not eligible for March disability assistance in accordance with Section 9(2) of the EAPWDR.

Panel Finding

According to the letter from Service Canada to the ministry dated January 13, 2020, the appellant was eligible for CPP Disability effective September 2018 with a base rate of $685.76 each month in 2018. The base rate increased to $701.53 for each month in 2019. Service Canada reimbursed the ministry for income assistance and disability assistance that was provided to the appellant for the period of September 2018 to December 2019 in the amount of $9,789.88. This amount appears to be based on a letter dated June 12, 2019, which indicates that the appellant was paid income assistance in the amount of $710 in September and December 2018, and January to March 2019; income assistance in the amount of $760 in April, May and June 2019; and disability assistance in the amount of $1183.42 from July to December 2019. The remaining amount of the retroactive CPP Disability payment, $1371.52 ($685.76 for each October 2018 and November 2018, the months where the appellant did not receive income assistance) was then issued to the appellant along with the appellant's January 2020 CPP Disability benefit of $714.86 from Service Canada. This CPP Disability amount totaled $2086.36 for January 2020.

The CPP Disability amount the appellant receive was considered "unearned income" under paragraph (f) of definition for "unearned income" in section 1 of the EAPWD Regulation (any type or class of Canada Pension Plan benefits) and is not exempt from disability assistance as requested by the appellant as it was for disability and not for orphan's benefits or a disabled contributor's child's benefit.

Schedule B, Section 11 of the EA Regulation is applicable for determining how the appellant's lump sum of backdated CPPD income should be treated. The appellant was not in receipt of income assistance for the period of October 2018 to November 2018 for which the $1371.52 lump sum payment was made. Accordingly, the ministry found that the $1371.52 lump sum CPPD the appellant received in January was to be treated in the month the appellant received it (January 2020).

For recipients of disability assistance, income received during the previous month is reported by the 5th of the current month and affects the following month's assistance (for example, January 2020 income was to be reported by February 5, 2020 and affected March 2020 assistance). The rate of disability assistance for a sole recipient with no dependents under Schedule A is $808.42 support and $375 shelter for a total of $1183.42. Therefore, as the appellant's $ 2086.36 net income exceeds the ministry's rate of assistance of $1183.42, the ministry found the appellant was not eligible for March disability assistance in accordance with Section 9(2) of the EAPWD Regulation.

As the appellant must claim CPP as unearned income, the panel finds the ministry was reasonable in determining the appellant was not eligible for March disability assistance.

Conclusion

The panel finds that the ministry's reconsideration decision which found the appellant was not eligible for March disability assistance was a reasonable application of the legislation in the circumstances of the appellant. The panel therefore confirms the ministry's decision. The appellant's appeal is thus not successful.

(2) If

(a) disability assistance is provided to a family unit for a calendar month or any portion of a calendar month that would not have been provided if a pension benefit had been paid for that calendar month, and
