Docket: IMM-467-23

Citation: 2024 FC 659

Ottawa, Ontario, April 30, 2024

PRESENT: Madam Justice Azmudeh

BETWEEN:

KENNY EDO ALOHAN

Applicant

and

THE MINISTER OF CITIZENSHIP AND IMMIGRATION

Respondent

JUDGMENT AND REASONS

I. Overview

[1] Kenny Edo Alohan [the “Applicant”] is seeking a Judicial Review under section 72(1) of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act [IRPA] concerning the rejection of his permanent resident application under the Permit Holder Class on December 28, 2022. The Judicial Review is dismissed for the following reasons.

[2] The parties do not dispute the facts of this case. The decision under review is the refusal of the Applicant’s permanent resident because an officer (the “Officer”) found that he had not resided in Canada continuously for five years as prescribed by section 65(b)(ii) of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Regulations [IRPR] with a valid Temporary Resident Permit (TRP).

[3] The Applicant obtained his first TRP for inadmissibility under section 41(a) of IRPA on January 5, 2016. His last TRP was issued on December 30, 2019 and was set to expire on August 30, 2020. He sent his application to renew it on August 28, 2020 and it was received the day after it expired, on August 31, 2020.

[4] A TRP holder of the Applicant's circumstance becomes eligible to apply for permanent residence (PR) after 5 years pursuant to s. 65(b)(ii) of IPRR; i.e., after January 5, 2021. The Applicant applied for PR on February 10, 2021. He based his application on the fact that he had maintained his temporary resident status, without break in continuity, for a five-year period.

[5] On November 10, 2022, the Applicant's TRP was refused. While the Applicant initially filed an Application for Leave and for Judicial Review with this Court to challenge the TRP decision, he did not pursue it and never filed his record. As a result, the Court dismissed this application.

[6] On December 28, 2022, the Applicant's PR application was also refused, namely because the Applicant had failed to maintain his status for five continuous years. The impugned decision reads as follows:

The original TRP was issued on 2016/01/05, therefore they must reside in Canada as a permit holder until 2021/01/05. The client's previous TRP expired on 2020/08/30 and a subsequent application was submitted on 2020/08/31, however that application was refused on 2022/11/10. Therefore the Applicant is not eligible under this program as they have not continuously resided in Canada as a permit holder for the required 5 years and do not hold a valid TRP.

III. Standard of Review

- [8] The parties submit, and I agree, that the standard of review in this case is reasonableness.
- [9] Reasonableness review is a deferential and disciplined evaluation of whether an administrative decision is transparent, intelligible and justified: Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v Vavilov, 2019 SCC 65, at paras 12-13 and 15 [Vavilov]; Mason v Canada (Citizenship and Immigration), 2023 SCC 21, at paras 8 and 63 [Mason].

IV. Analysis

A. Was the Officer's decision to refuse the PR application reasonable?

[10] At the judicial review hearing, there was some contest between the parties on the determinative issue before me. The Applicant argued that the decision-maker erroneously deemed him to be out of status only because the underlying TRP application was received one day late.

[11] The Applicant argued that the TRP application was deemed to be in time because of the following policy:

Temporary residents: Maintained status during processing (previously called implied status)

Date and time of receipt of application

The date and time of receipt are important for determining if status is maintained under subsection R183(5). For electronic applications, the department uses Coordinated Universal Time (UTC) around the world to ensure that time is equal for all. Therefore, receipt dates and times do not depend on time zones; all applications must be submitted before midnight UTC on the date the applicant's status expires. If the application was received after midnight UTC on the date of expiry, the applicant does not maintain their status under subsection R183(5).

The date received for paper applications is the date physically received and stamped at the Case Processing Centre. However, if the date physically received is after the expiry date of the applicant's status, the officer will backdate the received date by 7 days to account for any mail delivery delays. (Emphasis added)

If a temporary resident also applies for renewal of their work or study permit before the expiry of their existing permit and their permit expires before a decision is made, paragraph R186(u) or section R189 authorizes them to work or study without a permit under the same conditions pending a determination of their application for renewal and only as long as the person remains in Canada. (Emphasis in original)

[12] The Respondent argued that the reasons for the rejection of the PR application is not necessarily due to the timing of the underlying TRP application. Rather, it was because by the time an officer assessed the PR application, the Applicant had fallen short of the five-year residency requirement as a permit holder, and that the reasons reflect this.

[13] As stated, the Applicant's TRP application was rejected on November 10, 2022. His most recent TRP was only valid until August 30, 2020. Therefore, by the time an officer reviewed the PR application on December 28, 2022, the unequivocal fact before them was that the Applicant had a valid TRP only from January 5, 2016 until August 30, 2020. This amounted to 4 years and 7 months. Rejecting the PR application under the circumstances, and with the evidence before them, was reasonable.

[14] While the reasons briefly state the history of the TRP file, the officer noted that it was rejected on November 10th, 2022 and that this made him fall short of his five-year residency requirement. I would therefore disagree with the Applicant's characterization that the officer unreasonably rejected the PR application only because the underlying TRP was one day late and that the officer did not comply with the policy to deem it being in time. Once the TRP was rejected for any reason, it was reasonable for the officer not to deem the applicant to have been a permit holder after his last TRP had expired. The reasons reflect this.

[15] I therefore reject the judicial review application.

V. Conclusion

[16] The Officer's decision is reasonable. The application for judicial review is therefore dismissed.

[17] Neither party proposed a question for certification and I agree that none arises in this matter.
